On 20 September 1952 about ten Soviet ordnance experts arrived in Peiping from the Soviet Union to inspect arsenals and investigate conditions in China's arms production program. The Soviets formed three groups and on 21 September left Peiping to inspect arsenals in various areas of China. The first group will inspect the Central and South China Area and the East China Area; the second group will inspect the Southwest China Area and the Northwest China Area; and the last group will inspect the North China Area and the Northeast China Area.
